

0404752 Research Methodology

This course will enable graduate students to plan and conduct advanced research in order to create new knowledge in the engineering field and related disciplines. Topics covered are: The philosophy and practice of research in the field of engineering and related disciplines, methods and techniques for research in the engineering and cognate fields, processes for critically evaluating methods for the purposes of designing a research project, critical and creative thinking, writing and communication skills.